Construction Worker Job Interview Preparation Guide.

Question # 1

Explain how do you deal with situations where customers have problems with the quality of your work?

Answer:-

It is not always possible to satisfy everyone. However, it is our job to make sure that they are happy with what we do. If a customer has issues with the quality of my work, I confer with him to determine what went wrong and then take all measures to ensure I correct it.

Question # 2

Tell us What Specialized Construction Equipment Can You Use?

Answer:-

Interview questions should be used to determine if candidates have any experience operating specialized construction equipment. This equipment might include vehicles such as forklifts, bulldozers, excavators or trucks. Ask the candidate if he has a license or has received specialized training or certifications: "Please tell me more about your training and experience with bulldozers." A qualified candidate should be briefly asked to demonstrate his expertise by using the equipment in question under supervision.

Question # 3

Tell me what are the key responsibilities of a construction worker?

Answer:-

Major responsibilities of a construction worker include: breaking up concrete using jackhammers, operating drill machines as needed, shoveling construction material into cement mixers, positioning and aligning concrete and steel structures, signaling heavy machinery operators for correct placement of portable structures and setting up and removing of scaffoldings for support.

Question # 4

Explain What is Your Experience on Previous Jobs?

Answer:-

Interviews with railroad laborers should explore the candidate's previous experience in the construction field. General questions can ask about previous positions, specific projects and training or on-the-job instruction. Specialized questions should probe the candidate's personal role in such projects. For example, "Please describe your responsibilities and tasks you regularly completed when you worked on the Johnson Railroad project."

Question # 5

Explain a situation in which you had little or no direction. How did you deal with it?

Answer:-

Situations such as these arise often. Construction workers all have their own specialties and there are times when we do not get much direction. In a situation such as these, I make use of my own judgment as much as possible along with keeping in contact with customers to ask for periodic feedback.

Question # 6

Tell me what do you know about the job role and career path?

Answer:-

Questions assessing your knowledge of what the job role in that company entails and how your career path would pan out are designed to find out how committed you are to the career you've chosen and whether you have a realistic understanding of what the day job is like. Follow-up questions might include 'What do you think you will be doing day to day?', the classic 'Where do you think you'll be in five years?' and 'What do you think you will find most challenging in the role?'. This is another instance when you need to have done your research:

* Your answer should partly be based on what you know about the company - whether it a contractor or consultant and the type of projects they work on, for example.

- * You should also bear in mind the typical career path of people in your role, such as a professional qualification, and relate it back to the training and development in that company. In five years' time, for example, would you usually be chartered?
- * Take into consideration which areas are growing within the company and why - or why not.

Question # 7

Tell me do you have any experience in interpreting a blue print or a building design layout?

Answer:-

Last year it so happened that our contracting supervisor had to go on leave and I took charge of the team for 15 days. I understood, translated and implemented the blue print plan effectively while he was gone and on return he was very happy with my work

Question # 8

Explain how important is it to be able to read and interpret blueprints and electrical drawings?

Answer:-

There is nothing more important than being able to read and interpret blueprints and electrical drawings. This is because all activities of a construction worker depend on these two. If one cannot read and interpret these, one cannot plan and execute construction activities.

Question # 9

Tell me Do You Have the Physical Ability?

Answer:-

Working as a railroad laborer requires that candidates be able to meet sometimes demanding physical conditions. These include: lifting up to or over 50 pounds, standing for long periods of time, carrying heavy items for distances, wielding tools such as saws and hammers and the ability to bend over. Sample interview questions that directly probe these points include, "Are you able to stand for eight hours, other than your legally required breaks?"

Question # 10

Tell me have you ever had an on-the-job injury? Describe what happened and the measures you would take to ensure that it does not happen again?

Answer:-

Earlier on in my career, I fell from a high rise building that I was performing construction work on. I had been too sure of myself and decided not to fasten my harness because I was "only" 20 feet above the ground. I fell down and landed on my behind. I was lucky not to break my back. But from then on, I realized that even if one is 2 feet above the ground, a harness is essential.

Question # 11

Tell me what could you bring to the company, role or team?

Answer:-

This question could also be phrased as 'why should we hire you?'.

- * Your answer should partly be based around your skills (such as teamwork), and your enthusiasm for the industry, the job and the company.
- * If you have studied an industry-related degree, consider what you can offer in terms of your technical knowledge: during your course you should have been exposed to the latest thinking in terms of sustainability and methodology. While you should not make out you know it all, your knowledge should add some value to the team.

Question # 14

Illegal Construction Worker Job Interview Questions:

Answer:-

There are many questions employers cannot ask an employee. If confronted with any of these, or if you simply do not want to answer a personal or awkward question simply say, "Please explain to me how this question applies to the position." Usually the interviewer will change the question. However you do not have to answer any questions that make you uncomfortable.

Strong federal legislation bars employers from discriminating against any person on the basis of sex, race, age, national origin, or religion, or disability, or against workers age 40 or older. (Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title VII, and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, and Americans with Disabilities Act of 1991 Title I)

Typical illegal questions include:

- * How old are you?
- * Where were you born?
- * Do you hold a citizenship in other countries?
- * What is your medical history?
- * What is your religious affiliation?
- * Do you have children?
- * Have you ever changed your name?
- * Have you ever been arrested?
- * What holidays to you celebrate?
- * Do you have a disability?
- * Do you have a history of substance or alcohol abuse?
- * Does your spouse work and where?
- * Have you ever declared bankruptcy?

Question # 16

Tell us for you, what is the most enjoyable and most difficult part of this job?

Answer:-

I enjoy installing various systems into constructional structures specially the electrical ones since I find them very amusing and like to see how they work. The part I find difficult is when the plan changes after half or full has been done. Design modifications usually involve breaking down of a portion of construction and when redone its neatness is compromised
