Question # 10

Explain political science?

Answer:-

Political science is a social science concerned with the theory and practice of politics and the description and analysis of political systems and political behavior. It is often described as the pragmatic application of the art and science of politics defined as "who gets what, when and how", leaving out of the picture most of the "why".[1] Political science has several subfields, including: political theory, public policy, national politics, international relations, and comparative politics.

Question # 16

What is the difference between Income tax, corporate tax, professional tax, Entertainment Tax?

Answer:-

Corporate (or corporation) tax is paid by companies. Depending on the law of the nation concerned, it is charged on profits, on turnover or on certain sales - or of course a combination.

Income tax is paid by individuals and is a portion of their earnings and other income taken by the state.

Since a trading company must make a profit to survive and when setting prices will include their taxes as an essential expense, all these taxes (plus any others governments dream up such as duty on petrol, tobacco and alcohol) are, in the end, paid by the individual citizens. There is no free lunch: you cannot spare the citizens by taxing the businesses.

That is the weak point in the current policy of punishing the banks by taxing them. The banks are in a strong position when faced with the ordinary customer, and will recover the money by taking it out of our skin.

In the end the common man is, has always been, and (I am afraid) must always be Jack-pay-for-all. For ever at the bar buying, but never tasting the beer.

Question # 17

What is judicial activity?

Answer:-

The judiciary (also known as the judicial system or judicature) is the system of courts which interprets and applies the law in the name of the sovereign or state. The judiciary also provides a mechanism for the resolution of disputes. Under the doctrine of the separation of powers, the judiciary generally does not make law (that is, in a plenary fashion, which is the responsibility of the legislature) or enforce law (which is the responsibility of the executive), but rather interprets law and applies it to the facts of each case. The judiciary law has more power than the House of Representatives.

Question # 21

How can we say Political Science is a science?

Answer:-

Political science (or, if you want, politology) is a science for two reasons. First, because it is the structured study of a set of phenomena, involving itself with identifying them, grouping them, forming causal and critical relations amongst them and providing a theoretical framework for them by creating theories and testing them through the usage of experimentation and observation, and second, because it uses what is called the scientific method - i.e. creating and improving on theories by falsifying them that is, by testing them against existing observations and improving them (or disproving them) based on those observations
