Question # 2

What is the architecture of MS SQL Reporting service?

Answer:-

Reporting Services runs as a middle-tier server, as part of your existing server architecture. SQL Server 2000 should be installed for the database server, and Internet Information Services 6.0 as a Web server. The report server engine takes in report definitions, locates the corresponding data, and produces the reports. Interaction with the engine can be done through the Web-based Report Manager, which also lets you manage refresh schedules and notifications. End users view the report in a Web browser, and can export it to PDF, XML, or Excel.

Question # 4

Explain How does the report manager work in SSRS?

Answer:-

Report manager is a web application. In SSRS it is accessed by a URL. The interface of this Report manager depends on the permissions of the user. This means to access any functionality or perform any task, the user must be assigned a role. A user with a role of full permissions can entire all the features and menus of the report. To configure the report manager, a URL needs to be defined.
