Question # 3

How to create 2 table of contents in a single word...Actually, I created one table of content for module1....and in the same word i want to create another table of content for module2...IF i am following the procedure which is specified to create table of contents.....then the table of contents added for module1 is reflecting at module2 table of contents. I am unable to create table of contents for module2 in same word?

Answer:-

Use different table identifiers. Each TOC is given a letter identifier, and the entries for each TOC are marked with that letter. So "C" entries go into TOC "C".

Split the document into separate sequential bookmarked areas. Each bookmarked part then has a TOC created for it

Question # 5

What is the importance of documentation for a product based company?

Answer:-

In a product based company, documentation plays a huge role in attracting new customers, helping the existing ones with their way around the product. It is important to showcase the product, its features, what's new scenarios, the new end and fast solutions to certain previously known problems. All this information should be communicated in a clear and concise manner, that actually interests the potential user to go a step further in getting to know more about the product. In case of a current user, he/she should be comfortable to look into the documentation for any potential troubleshooting issues with the product. If a product documentation can achieve that, it itself is a success to the company in many ways.
